About our Presenter:

Marly Greenwood (she/her) is an educational professional with an array of experience in early learning, school education, adult education and workplace training.

She has extensive experience developing course content for adults in the workplace and tertiary settings (TAFE NSW).

Marly was a regular volunteer and an advocate for LGBTQ+ parented families. This was fuelled by her family's experiences of homophobia, exclusion and discrimination.

In more recent years Marly has witnessed a great deal of change for LGBTQ+ people and their families but continues to see and hear of concerns that reinforce that there is still considerable work to be done.

She believes that teaching children about diversity is the path to creating a generation of accepting humans who celebrate, rather than fear, diversity.
